ENATOR PROCTOR'S FORCE BILL.

retary Lawrence Gardner, of the Demoonal League of Clubs, has made public he following interesting chapter of heretounwritten political history.

One of the most insidious attempts to put pon the statute books a law no less offensive r perilous than the Force bill stands to credit of Senator Medicald Proctor, Vermont, formerly Secretary of War.

of Vermont, formerly Secretary of War, in President Harrison's Cabinet. He entered upon his legislative duties fresh from the administrative councils of President Harrison, and he was easyer for bayoness and military rule. That he did not succeed in securing an enactmentate would have exaited the military overthe civil powers of the country was due alone to the vigilance of the house Committee on Military Affairs.

The title of the bill was such as to attract no attention. The first of the bill related merely to penalties to be imposed on soldiers who sold or carelessly lost equipments furnished by the Government. The latter pare was merely a change in some of maked by the Government. The interpart was merely a change in some of the technicalities of procedure. The meat in the cocoanut was contained in the middle of the bill, neatly sandwiched between the prelude and finale. This was an amendment of Article 8d, so that if would provide:

- That a general courtins it is is all have the power to punish summarily for contempt of its authority such acts as would be punishable summarily by the highest civil court of criminal jurisdiction of the State, Territory or District in which the court-martini may all if committed in contempt of its authority.

may sit if committed in contempt of its authority.

"Provided, that the punishment for contempt of court by a civilian shall not exceed confinement for three months, or fine of $100 and confinement until paid.

It was in this section of the bill that Senter Proctor endeavored to enact a law subjecting the arbitrary dictum of a mere military court, wholly irresponsible to any other authority, and with no restraint upon its nowers, the personal liberty and private projectly of any civilian criticen who might incur its displeasure without right of app at course or hearing, and giving it authority to imprison him until he paid their americement.

The bill passed the Senate, teing merely run through the hopper without discussion or examination, the Senate being deceived by the innocuous title.

o examination, the Senate being deceived by the innocuous title.

When it reached the House Committee it struck a rock. The indicious character of the provision was exposed, and Chairman Outhwaite report against the bill.

The House sustained its Committee, and the bill went back to the Senate with the infamous article 86 stricken out.

Stepping as he did directly from the Cabinet of the President to the floor of the Senate it is a sir presumption that he bill presented by him, Senator it is a sir presumption that he bill presented by him, Senator Proc.or reflected the President's views. That such twins as the Force bill and the Proctor amendment did not go on the statute books the country may thank the Democrats in Congress."
